Urban Strategist and Founder, Urban Toolbox Westpac Social Change Fellow

Julia Suh is an urban strategist and the founder of Urban Toolbox: a human-centred design consultancy that transforms valuable urban spaces for the common good. She has taught and practiced architecture, placemaking and urban design from New York, Auckland, Hanoi and Sydney, building an extensive knowledge of various communities; and urban spaces that support or neglect them.

This year, as a Westpac Social Change Fellow, Julia continues to advocate vulnerable communities' right to the city. Her work in stakeholder engagement, planning policy and urban research has been locally recognised by the Planning Institute of Australia, and internationally by The Guardian. Julia received her M.Arch. from Yale University and B.Arch. with First Class Honours from the University of Auckland.
