

David Tickle
Principal, HASSELL

Leading the HASSELL global urban design team, David delivers exceptional urban places, unlocking the full design, economic and social potential of our cities. He uses collaboration and research as a method for understanding the long term objectives of developing urban fabric.

David has experience leading a range of city-shaping master planning and urban design projects internationally. David led the team for the Newcastle Urban Renewal Strategy, developing an innovative vision that integrates future transport, public land use and heritage renewal for Urban Growth NSW. This vision is expected to fundamentally change the Newcastle CBD into a vibrant hub for locals to live and work. He has also been key to the renewal strategies for major projects in Sydney including Sydney Light Rail, Sydney Metro North West and the Parramatta Road corridor.

David has been influenced by his time living and working in China. He actively facilitates the exchange of urban strategies for workplace, housing and transport between HASSELL studios in China and Australia. He leads the Urban Futures initiative at HASSELL, researching and rethinking the challenges of urbanisation.
